As you know, The University of West Los Angeles (UWLA) offers high-quality legal education to a diverse group of primarily part-time students. In the late nineties, UWLA designed a plan to re-image and re-energize the University. As a part of that plan, UWLA would sell the building that houses our Inglewood campus. This would allow the University to pay off all of the institution's long-term debt, create new admission standards for the Law School, and concentrate on the success and retention of our students.

Having sold our Inglewood facility, the University has been seeking a proper location for our new Westside campus. Given transportation realities for our students and faculty, the University chose a facility conveniently located within two miles of our existing Inglewood campus-in the airport corridor.

Prior to becoming available, this facility was a professional learning center. It provides a conducive environment for both our inter-campus and intra-campus technology expansion program. Additionally, the existing configuration allows UWLA to utilize all of the square footage, lowering both operating and maintenance costs at the new building.

This location, as part of a professional complex, is attractive and convenient. Students will enjoy the improved accessibility of student services, classes and academic support resources.

UWLA needs your help to launch this next phase of our evolution-your gift of $100 or more toward the $50,000 costs of transitioning to the new site will help UWLA successful complete our transformation. Of course, a gift of any size will be deeply appreciated.

Your support will safeguard and broaden access to affordable education for those who otherwise would not be able to pursue their dream of joining the legal profession. Thank you in advance for your consideration.
